CASEGOODS CONSTRUCTION

- A custom approach is taken to build quality casegoods and cabinetry by using superior mechanical fasteners and adhesives specific for the type of furniture being made and the materials being used.
- The types of joints that are used for construction, such as mortise and tenon, dado, miter and dowel among others, are based on which are most appropriate for the construction and the unique application.
- All cabinets are constructed with internal cross rails to ensure rigidity and long-lasting life.
- All lumber is kiln dried and quality-checked to tight standards at various stages of production to prevent latent defects of cracking, warping, twisting, checking, and other effects from wet or improperly dried lumber.
- High-quality, vinyl-wrapped, drawers are miter and dowel constructed with a locked-in-place bottom panel secured with high strength adhesives providing maximum protection and easy cleaning.
- Drawers use steel ball-bearing drawer glides common with high end furniture to provide quiet, smooth, and dependable drawer action.
- Clear topcoat finishing is scratch, stain, and heat resistant.
- Every cabinet includes adjustable floor leveling glides for added stability on any type of floor.

UPHOLSTERY CONSTRUCTION

- Mortise and tenon joinery offer superior strength and stability.
- Closely spaced tight loop sinuous coil suspension system for long life and superior support.
- Corners are integrated and interlocked with the frame for added stability and strength.
